At once a deputation of citizens started on a run for the nearest and, indeed, the only doctor. It was long after midnight. They beat on the door and yelled, and finally a second-story window was raised and the doctor's head appeared. It looked in the moonlight like the head of a man himself recently returned from a big time.

THE MOTHER GOOSE FAIRY BOOK

King Arthur rules no land just now; still he's a goodly king. Throughout the world he s popular as King of Plum Pudding! In spotless cap and apron tied about his great girth this genial old fellow stands and stirs great bowls of batter that would take the strength of nine ordinary men! But his love of hearing kiddies praise his good pudding keeps him working day and night to make this Christmas table delicacy

The Queen of Hearts's crisp jelly tarts which tempted Knave to steat, were not good baking as those she's making to grace each Christmas meal. The reason that Mother Hubbard's cupboard is bare is that she has given all her jams and preserves to the Queen of Hearts, who has to make 1,000,000 Christmas tarts before Dec. 24. Is it any wonder that these pastry bakers have begun already? And as for sugar candy!

So in demand are plum puddings, this king employed Jack Horner to sluff in plums big as two thumbs, while silting in a corner. King Arthur promised to pay Jack Horner two whole full-sized puddings if he would whistle continuously during work hours. You may think this strange, but this was the only way the king could know that Jack Horner

Well! Little Jack-a-Dandy cried so loud, afraid that they had forgotten to make heaps o' sugar candy, that to quiet him Mother Goose herself made five hundred tons of the special kinds that are very best for kiddles to have. No fear of you kiddies not having the best of care taken to make your Christmas what you wish it, with Mother Goose folks helping Santa the way they are doing! 1 .
